VISCOUNT MILNER, SECRETARY OF WAR OF ENGLAND, EXPLAINS WHY ALLIED TROOPS REMAIN IN EAST.

PROPERTY WAS SAVED

Tells in Detail of How Property and Military Stores at Archangel Were Saved by Allies.

London, Dec. 19.—In response to protests in the press against the so-called evacuation of the Russian army, the British government has issued a statement to the effect that the evacuation of the Russian army was a necessary measure to protect the property and military stores at Archangel.

The statement says that the evacuation of the Russian army was a necessary measure to protect the property and military stores at Archangel. It also says that the evacuation of the Russian army was a necessary measure to protect the property and military stores at Archangel.

PREMIER CLEMENCEAU IN CONFERENCE WITH PRESIDENT WILSON

(By Associated Press.)

Paris, Dec. 19.—Premier Clemenceau and Col. E. M. House visited President Wilson this morning at the Marais mansion.

The French premier and the president were engaged for more than an hour in an intimate discussion. Col. House also conferred with the president during the morning.

The president's engagements for the day caused him to postpone his plans for a drive with Mrs. Wilson. An invitation has been extended to the president to visit London at Christmas time, but it is improbable that he will accept.

There is little doubt, however, that Premier Lloyd George and his associates have been re-elected. An interesting feature of the president's visit to Paris, beginning Thursday, is that the president's cabinet is technically not in a position to speak for the government.

WARNING!

In view of the increasing prevalence of Spanish influenza throughout the country and also the danger of its again becoming a serious epidemic in Janesville I have again been urged to again place stringent restrictions upon all places of amusement, dance halls and retail liquor establishments similar to that enforced some weeks ago.

However after making a careful investigation of the entire situation I have decided to issue an official warning to all citizens and business houses that precautions must be taken to prevent contagion, that they must be satisfied that the places of amusement, dance halls and retail liquor establishments must not be overcrowded during this Christmas rush or radical action will be taken.

The state laws I have full power to act in cases of emergency and trust that it will not be necessary to exert these powers at the present time. Special warning is given to all citizens to be on their guard against the least symptom of influenza should at once see a physician and go to bed.

Frequent spraying of the nose and mouth with disinfectant and the entire system free from impurities by drinking plenty of water and breathing fresh air are some of the most important precautions to be taken. This is a time of year when all precautions should be taken and warning is issued to be careful and obey the rules of hygiene.

PIPER'S PAST LIFE IS INVESTIGATED

Muskegon, Mich., Dec. 19.—The matrimonial experiences of Miss Frieda Weichmann, Chicago bookkeeper, after an automobile trip lasting several months in 1918, were being investigated by the police here today.

Interest in the accused man's life was stimulated when it was established by statements from his wife, Mrs. Weichmann, that he had been married to a woman named Iva Goodenough, a fifteen year old school girl, after a divorce from his first wife.

Letters which Piper wrote to his present wife during the automobile trip, according to the police, were being investigated by the police here today.

The body of Miss Frieda Weichmann, Chicago, because of whose death Miss Piper is accused, was held here on a murder charge, will be removed from Oakwood cemetery here and a post mortem performed.

In discussing today his marriage in 1903 to Miss Iva Goodenough, a fifteen-year-old Benton Harbor girl, Piper said: "I was a high school love affair. We had trouble with her parents and I left."

Miss Frieda Weichmann came to her death by violence, according to three physicians who today examined the body of the girl because of whose death Miss Piper is accused.

Copenhagen, Dec. 19.—The German government has decided to convene a conference of representatives of all the states of the German empire on December 29, to elect a president of the German republic, according to a Berlin report. This step is said to have been taken in order to avoid further disorders.

Berlin, Dec. 19.—The second day's session of the congress of soldiers and workers' councils of Germany was marked by stormy soundings. The Landtag of the majority socialist members of the government denounced the business methods and distasteful attitude of the soldiers and workers' councils of Berlin. He declared that the executive committee of the council had presented a chaotic budget statement.

The manner in which the congress had been conducted, the Landtag declared, was a new example of the government's policy of deception and betrayal. The Landtag declared that the executive committee of the council had presented a chaotic budget statement.

HOG ISLAND PLANT COST $63,300,000 CHARLES PIEZ SAYS

Washington, Dec. 19.—The cost of the great shipbuilding plant at Hog Island was estimated today at $63,300,000 by Charles Piez, general manager of the shipping board's emergency fleet corporation. He said that the yard, which has delivered one ship and has fifty keels laid, should be completed in sixty days.

Mr. Piez was testifying before the senate commerce committee at the opening of its investigation of the emergency fleet corporation. He said that the government had taken over the yard and its operations as of November 1, 1918.

The original estimate of cost for a plant on a smaller scale was $21,000,000 and this was increased later to $27,000,000. Piez said that the government will determine whether the government will take over the shipyard.

Investigation of the construction of the Hog Island shipyard was resumed today by the senate commerce committee. Charles Piez, general manager of the Emergency Fleet Corporation, and Charles M. Schwab, until recently director general, as the federal judge in the case, will open the inquiry resulted from a statement recently made in the senate that $55,000,000 had been spent so far on construction and that the one ship completed there was not seaworthy until returned to the yards for modifications.

Mr. Piez testified that the total expended on the plant amounted to about $58,000,000 and that the American International Shipbuilding Corporation, which has the contract for building the plant, has not yet received payment of more than $10,000,000.

SOCIALIST TELS STORY

ADOLPH GERMER SECRETARY OF NATIONAL SOCIALIST PARTY DESCRIBES ANTI-WAR CAMPAIGN OF HIS PARTY.

DENIES SLACKER FUND

Emphatically Denied That Any Money From Defense Fund Was Used To Get Slackers Out of Jail.

Chicago, Dec. 19.—An effort to show that the anti-war campaign of the socialists in this country was part of an international movement to abolish war and militarism in the interest of humanity and to prevent a world war, was made by Adolph Germer, secretary of the National Socialist party, today at the opening of the trial of the five socialists charged with conspiracy to defeat the government's war aims.

Germer took the stand for the defense at the close of the prosecution's case yesterday and immediately testified that the socialists had no money and that they had no plan to get slackers out of jail.

Lawyers for the five socialists sought to prove that the socialists had no money and that they had no plan to get slackers out of jail. Germer testified that the socialists had no money and that they had no plan to get slackers out of jail.

Hoped United States. Germer said that the socialists hoped to compel the United States to take the lead in the movement to end the war and enforce the disarmament of the world. Germer said that the socialists had no money and that they had no plan to get slackers out of jail.

Official Organ. The witness said the American socialist was the official organ of the organization and that it was a democratic party.

Several of my articles were reprinted at different times," said the witness. Germer admitted that the party had published the anti-war pamphlets to which objection was made by the government, including the St. Louis convention proclamation and the Chicago convention proclamation.

Describes Raid. Germer told of the raid made by government agents on the headquarters of the National socialist party in Chicago September 6, 1917 when all records in the offices were seized.

RED CIRCLE CANTEN MAY BE ESTABLISHED

Meeting of Committee From Rotary Club and Directors of Y. M. C. A. Held Last Evening To Discuss Plan

Soldiers and sailors passing through Janesville or spending their furloughs here will be able to visit a Red Circle canteen and purchase necessary articles at nominal prices if the plans of a committee appointed by the Rotary club and the directors of the Y. M. C. A. work out.

The committee, consisting of M. O. Mout, chairman, F. A. Blackman, George F. Kimball and J. A. Melrose met with the directors of the Y. M. C. A. last evening and heard a report by J. Edgar Biggs, representing the war and navy departments commissions on training camp activities in war community service.

Mr. Biggs has studied the situation in Janesville and stated to the men present, that a canteen would be a great benefit to the soldiers. Janesville has become a mecca for the khaki clad men and several hundred visit Janesville over the holidays and there is not a day when there are not a few soldiers in the city.

It was deemed advisable to establish the Red Circle club in connection with the Y. M. C. A. and this plan was heartily approved by all. The Y. M. C. A. has been entertaining many soldiers since the beginning of the war and it was thought that to establish the canteen at that institution.

At the canteen, the soldiers may purchase candy and other sweets and also lunches. It is thought that the regular meals will be served, but that lunches will be ready for the men.

The extra help will be supplied by the committee, and all of the expenses incidental to the canteen will be paid by the committee and the Y. M. C. A. will also be paid a small sum for the building.

F. A. Blackman, a member of the committee, when discussing the plan, this morning, was heartily in favor of such an establishment and stated that with the large number of soldiers that visited the city each week, it would be a great benefit for the men.

Mr. Biggs, in discussing the plan at the meeting last evening, stated that he had studied the local situation and was very favorably impressed with it and also explained the urgent need for the canteen, and also expressed his pleasure at the cooperation of the people and the Y. M. C. A.

LIEUT. ROBT. DAILEY RECALLED FOR SERVICE

Ordered to Report At Headquarters Of Red Cross In Chicago Saturday. May Go To Siberia.

Lieut. Robert Dailey of the American Red Cross has been ordered back to Chicago for further duty. Lieut. Dailey arrived home about two weeks ago but has expected a call for after war service.

He received a telegram this morning from Col. H. P. Harding ordering him to report to the Chicago headquarters on December 21st, for duty. Lieut. Dailey stated this morning that he had no idea where he would be sent but undoubtedly would go to Palestine or Siberia.

Lieut. Dailey enlisted in the Red Cross in September and was ordered to the Red Cross Training Camp at Chicago. He was commissioned a first lieutenant shortly before the armistice was signed and was at Hoboken, New Jersey, the day the armistice came. He is awaiting word to sail for Siberia. He will leave Janesville tomorrow for Chicago.

He also stoutly denied the allegation that he drove his young daughter from the house thinly clad on Tuesday evening.

JAYHAWKING.

Explanation of this term is crossing the streets at places where there are no regular street crossings. The automobile is not like the old-fashioned team you led at the village hitching post and then walked to whatever store you wished. It is a new-fangled sort of a "critter" and you must beware of it. There are carns established for the parking of autos on both North and South Main streets and on Milwaukee street, east, and the approaches to the bridge.
However, these rules are violated daily, now the Christmas rush is on,
and so many out-of-town cars are in the city, more than ever. Men and women should be warned not to cross the streets at angles, but go to the cross-walks provided, in plain words, do not be "JAYHAWKERS."
One serious accident has happened from this cause and others may occur. Let us prevent them. We want this Christmas to be the merriest and happiest we have enjoyed for some time, so why tempt fate and give the cruel auto driver heart disease by not complying to the traffic rules. Do not be a "JAYHAWKER."

INTO GERMANY.

Possibly President Wilson should not have left the United States and gone to Europe at this time, but just the same he has done it. He has been equally received in Paris and even the English refuse to stop celebrating just as a lot of Janesville citizens did on Peace day. Now he plans to spend Christmas with the American occupation army in Germany. Think of that? He may not be actually with our own Janesville and Rock county boys in the 32nd and 33rd divisions or with the 28th infantry where so many of our local men were transferred to, but he will be in Germany and with the headquarters, and that means he is visiting the whole of that brave little army that is now on German soil and following the battles of the administration, "watchful waiting." Then he goes to England and later to Italy and meanwhile he will have a chance to reorganize his views of war that have been compiled from a distance of three thousand miles by actually seeing the devastation wrought by the warring Huns who now seek money and largess from the United States. Perhaps it is just as well Wilson is over there after all and not backer alike. He thought the war was three thousand miles away and we used French guns and ammunition in consequence.

THE RED CROSS.

This Red Cross work means a lot more than the average individual thinks it does. They figure the Red Cross along with the brand of bandages and cotton and other marchandise goods sold in the days of peace.
They do not understand that the money raised right here in Janesville and throughout Rock county may be expended in Rock county in time of need, just as it was in the great war which devastated northern Minnesota and Wisconsin just a few years ago. The Red Cross work does not end with the signing of the peace pact. It just begins for them because, for then its workers can enter those stricken countries and give the material aid which our dollars aid them to do.

Of course belonging to the Red Cross is a patriotic duty, but cast that thought aside and look at it from the purely humanitarian point of view.
Being a member of this nation-wide organization, whose insignia, the Chinese Cross, typifies mercy, aid and justice, I tell you it is worth while as individuals to have the feeling in your hearts you have helped make this organization possible. The Red Cross recognizes no creed, distinguishes neither between friend or foe, it stands for humanity just as our soldier boys fought for democracy of the world. The campaign for members is drawing to a close. Have you your badge yet? If not, why not?
What excuse are you going to make to your neighbor whose sons enjoyed the privileges of the Red Cross hospitals, and their wondrous activities on the war front? What excuse will you make to your posterity when the history of this world struggle is written if you are not able to tell them truthfully you did your share? Think it over and join the vast millions who recognize the worth and value of this world-wide organization—the Red Cross.

MOTIVE FOR FOOD SAVING.

Many people feel that now the war is won, we have no motive for saving food. There is the motive of generosity to our allies who have fought so nobly in our interest. But selfish people don't consider that very much now.

It is, however, a good business proposition to send over all the food we can, and in case of famine conditions even to send something to Germany. Europe is seething with unrest, owing to the hard conditions that must now be faced. Every form of crazy notion is spreading. Bolshevism and other crank ideas will thrive on hunger and starvation.

The more famine there is in Europe, the longer we shall have to keep a great army over there. Also if these people are to settle down and begin buying our manufactured products of peace time again, they must be helped to get by until next year's crops. The more food we can send to Europe, the quicker business conditions will return to normal.

THE CHRISTMAS OF 1918.

The Christmas celebration of 1918 will not be quite the ordinary one of cheerful but sometimes superficial merriment. There are many, many homes where there will be an empty chair for the boy who lies under the soil in France. In millions of others the boy is separated by thousands of miles of distance. The broken circle can not have quite the unbroken joy of ordinary days.

But it is a Christmas that should run very deep into our lives. It will seem more like the first Christmas of all. Then as now war had been ruling the earth. Defiant, arrogant tyrants sat on their thrones, and made cruel war. The Christ was looked to as the one who should bring peace.
No other blessing was so much desired.

So for the past years we have longed for peace with the deepest yearning of the heart. Now it has come, and the Christ spirit has triumphed over the forces of wrong.
Its silent influence has proved more powerful than the worst engines of war, the malice of man could produce. It has overthrown the greatest system of military force the world ever created.

It has nerved men to fight on until wrong and injustice were pulled down from their high seats of power and humbled in the dust. So let us gather about our firesides with a deep thankfulness that the longings of our hearts have been fulfilled.
Let us not forget the homes that are empty and broken, whether by the losses of war or by pestilence.
Let no one be lonely or hungry on this blessed day. We must make it a time of joy for the children, so that they shall remember it as the greatest of the year. So let our Christmas be one of love and generosity, the open house, the reunion of families, the hand of welcome, and relief to the friendless and destitute.

ON THE SPUR of the MOMENT

BY E. M. MOUTON

ADVERTISING ENTRICO.
The best joke of the year was Mr. Caruso's father-in-law idea. Caruso has to advertise himself. Evidently he has never heard his son-in-law sing. It would hardly be amiss for him to purchase standing room and squeeze himself into a small space where he could listen for a bit. Perhaps he might then conclude that he carried an enormous tonnage of coal to Newcastle when he informed people that Mr. Enrico Caruso is a "public singer."

Those who think that the singing of this tenor in "The Prophet" is inspired—those who think Enrico Caruso's voice is the one voice of all ages, resent his being called a "public singer" seeking "bald and blatant advertising." The sun, the moon, the stars and Enrico Caruso need not to advertise.

CARDINAL ATTENDS PEACE SERVICES

Cardinal Amette.

The picture shows Cardinal Amette, archbishop of Paris, entering the Cathedral of Notre Dame, where the Te Deum was sung in honor of peace. The archbishop constantly cheered and consoled Paris folk during the war and his counsel kept them hopeful in the darkest hours.

Just Folks

By EDGAR A. GUEST.

A GOLF PLAYER'S CONFESSION.

Whenever I have slipped away, a quiet game of golf to play. The birds have whispered from the trees:

"The boys are fighting overseas." Above me in God's patch of sky I've heard the aeroplanes go by. And all the time a touch of shame has marred the pleasure of the game.

I've told myself a thousand lies. I've said I needed exercise. To play, I've said I had the right. Because I was too old to fight. For every time I've slipped away, Where all was beautiful to play, I've thought of them with sword and gun Who were not having any fun.

My comrades used to wonder why. The game I played had gone away. "You used to drive in perfect style. And now your slicing all the while." They'd say to me: "Your puts are bad. Where is the skill that once you had?" And this was all I'd ever say: "I guess my thoughts are far away!"

And so they were, however hard. Against such wandering I'd guard. I'd see the birds across the sea. Where I believed I ought to be. I'd think how pitifully small. "Your service here is, after all." And I would feel my cheeks grow hot. And then, of course, I'd dub the shot.

But yesterday the canons ceased. And I went out as one released. From weight of care and conscious strain. And found my long lost drive again. I kept my eye upon the ball. And did not lift my head at all. Unhampered by a sense of shame, My conscience let me play the game.

Curious Coconut Crab.

The coconut crab of Christmas island earns its name by the way it makes its living. Except for its annual visit to the sea, it lives in a hole in the ground lined with coconut fibers and climbs up the coconut trees to procure its food. According to American Forestry, this "robber-crab's method of carrying coconuts is to strip them of their husks and then to hold the nut under some of its walking legs, while it retires, raised high on the hips of those legs not used for this purpose." After removing the husk from the coconuts the crab "hammers on the round depressions at one end till entrance is effected."

DETAILED TO HEAD NAVIGATION BUREAU

Capt. Victor Blue.

Capt. Victor Blue, now in command of the U. S. superdreadnaught Texas, has been chosen for detail as chief of the bureau of navigation. He is to be given the rank of rear admiral. He was chief of the bureau for four years previous to August 1916. He was then assigned to duty at sea. Blue's nomination has gone to the senate. The nomination of Rear Admiral David Taylor for detail as chief constructor of the navy was sent to the senate at the same time.

The Picture Hat

By CECILLE LANGDON

(Copyright, 1918, Western Newspaper Union.)

"Isaac," spoke old Jacob Zelder, "I am going to send you on the road." "Oh, father!" exclaimed the son of the old job-lots dealer in a transport of delight, "the ambition of my life at last! It almost made me weep when I saw Abe Kozern start out on his trip—fine sample cases, new suit, diamond pin, best hotels, Pullman sleeper, automobile to visit his customers. Oh! Ah! It is the business!"

"Yes, Isaac," replied the shrew-faced father, "but you don't start out that way, but cheap and modest until you have demonstrated your ability to sell goods. Now this will be a special trip. I have managed to buy cheap one hundred fine picture hats. They are last year's stock delayed in shipment, but you must find customers who don't know the difference. See?" And skeezy Isaac winked knowingly. "You are to sell them for twelve dollars apiece, but not to the trade, for they will know they are last year's goods."

"Leave it to me, father," blinked and chuckled the ambitious son.

"If they don't go fast at the big price," continued old Jacob, "try poorer customers at cheaper rates—we must be kind to the poor, my son!" and in high feather, with a sample hat in a neat inoffensive looking case, Isaac started forth on his first commercial adventure forthwith.

Isaac was clever, specious, tricky. He picked out the somewhat way-back town of Lydston as a fair point of assault. Now, in Lydston, pretty as a picture, half in love with a soldier boy, and likely to become wholly so, was Ina Dyrnad. In the parlor of the little home Isaac appeared one forenoon.

He had a lively story to tell—a few special latest design Paris hats had come the way of the great business house he represented. It was his purpose to sell only one at each town. He had understood that Miss Dyrnad was at the head of the elite of Lydston and abashedly he produced the hat. It really was very handsome, and he induced Ina to try it on, and it became her as any old hat would, this jewel of beauty and grace! Ina coveted that hat, but her eye fell upon a letter she had written and she sighed, but submissively, and said:

"I am just using the last of my pin money for a special purpose," and after a vast amount of persuasion Isaac let go of this prospective victim, but proceeded to visit other homes with the same plausible story. In fact, by nightfall the industrious envy of Job-Lots Zelder had sold 11 hats, all the same, to as many of the feminine bonton of Lydston, each one feeling that she would bloom grandly to the envy of her less fortunate sisters the following Sunday. Then Isaac went among the families living at the industrial edge of Lydston and slaughtered off a baker's dozen of the hats at a lower price.

Viola Marsh, the closest friend of Ina, calling upon her next day, found her trimming up her old hat. Ina was intensely human and had sighed many times at a thought of the beautiful Parisian creation she had been compelled to pass by. She brightened up, however, as she said to the sister of Victor Marsh, in camp 20 miles distant:

"I have ordered the birthday surprise for Victor. There's a fountain pen, and oh! such an exquisite outfit—soap, cartridges, automatic shaving brush, and all that. It took all of my poor little twelve dollars, but I am so glad to help for the comfort of Uncle Sam's soldier boy."

"For one of them in particular, eh, Ina," rallied Viola, and Ina blushed the color of a peony and fluttered like a timid bird.

Isaac Zelder, chuckling, grinning, exultant, returned to the city home to be greeted with open arms and a warm welcome by his proud and grateful father.

"All the hats shipped, father?" asked the buoyant-spirited son.

"C. O. D., and the money all in. Isaac, you are a success and I shall start you out on your next trip in grand style."

Lydston had a sensation the following Sunday morning. Eleven indices of fashion, double that number of more humble representatives from the poorer quarter, appeared on the streets with the famous Parisian picture hat sold to "only one customer in a town." The local milliner retired the imported creation by showing a picture of the same in catalogues a year old.

And Ina, in her tastefully trimmed over hat was a gorgeous contrast, looking lovelier than ever and oh! so happy when Victor Marsh expressed his delight over the comfort kit to which she had devoted her little savings. She glanced up from under her home-made headgear in response to the thanks of her knight errant, so lovely and enticing, that the impulsive fellow forgot himself and kissed her audaciously.

"It was your hat!" he floundered—"don't scold me, you looked so sweet in it and—I couldn't help it!" And as Ina did not particularly wish him to help it, that was the beginning of their mutual ardent hopes.

ATHENA CLASS HAS INTERESTING PROGRAM

An interesting program on The Liquor Question was given at a meeting of the Athena Class, held on yesterday afternoon in the library hall. Mrs. Buckmaster had charge of the lesson, and she brought out many facts in connection with the early history of the temperance movement, as shown by the Good Templars, the W. C. T. U., the Catholic T. A. B., the Prohibition party, and the Anti-Saloon League. The figures showed that about two billion dollars worth of liquor was consumed in the United States yearly, costing in an annual tax eighteen dollars for each man, woman and child in the country. This amount is about three and a half times as much as is expended for schools.

The effects of intemperance in poverty, crime, insanity and disease were noted and various methods to control the traffic were mentioned.

In the outlook for the future it was seen that three quarters of the area of the United States was already dry territory, and about one half of the population.

The burden of taxation caused by liquor was noted, and the fact that business houses claimed that liquor lessened efficiency of workers, was also shown.

Mrs. Burnham gave a short review of newspaper reports on the subject, one of them showing that recent items saying that the government was using whisky to check influenza, originated with the wholesale liquor houses. The

Two Headliners This Week
The week end vaudeville program which starts tonight at the Apollo contains two headliner acts of unusual merit.

The first feature is Wright's Hawaiians, a group of natives who give their native songs and music in the inimitable manner peculiar to their native isles and which is always enjoyed by American audiences.

The second feature will be a real live motion picture star in the flesh, Billy Quirk, formerly a star with the Vitagraph studios and now in vaudeville, offering songs and stories.

How "Black Watch" Got Name.
In the old days the regiments of the British army were known by the color of their uniforms, as the White regiment, the Blue regiment, or the Red regiment, and so ad infinitum. It is quite possible, therefore, that the was a Black regiment, from whence came the Black Watch. The Red regiment, incidentally, was Cromwell's Ironsides. But the term "Black Watch" was also used for the Guards of the Dominicans or Black Friars, and came to be applied also to the scullions in the kitchens of the great houses, whose business it was to look after the pots and pans.

HEART AND HOME PROBLEMS

LETTERS MAY BE ADDRESSED TO MRS. THOMPSON, IN CARE OF THE GAZETTE

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I am 18 years old, considered very good looking, neat and a good musician. I am rather shy and backward and sometimes rather distant. I have a lot of girl friends and have a splendid time with them. I have a lot of boy friends, too, but none of them ever seemed to care enough about me to go with me.

There are only two things that I know of that keeps me from having the good times other girls have with boy friends.

When a small child I was rather unfortunate, for I was stricken with paralysis. This left me slightly lame. It is hardly noticeable, but enough to make a very slight limp as I walk. I know I am still very young and have plenty of time but I have just been wondering if there would be any one for me. I am so thankful when I see someone who is much more unfortunate than I am that I am no longer thinking, "Oh, he wouldn't like me because I am a little lame."

What the way to feel? Which of the accounts for my not having anyone who really likes me—my shyness or because it has been the will of our Father that I be slightly lame?

I do not believe you have touched upon the real reason why you do not have boy callers.

You have had a misfortune in your life which has saddened you and made you older for your age than most girls. Besides this, you are a musician. For both these reasons you would select a man for a friend, rather than a boy, because a man would have greater understanding. You have nothing in common with young boys and so there is not a mutual attraction between you.

Of course you should not think of your lameness when you meet or talk to men. It is your personality that will like. When you are older and meet men with developed tastes they will not consider your lameness or your shyness; they will like you for what you are—pretty, shy, a musician. Your lameness will be a disadvantage.

A GIFT FOR A WANDERER.

Do you have among your friends anyone who chooses or is obliged to spend considerable time in boarding houses or small hotels? If you have you may be interested in a Christmas gift which some friends of mine made last year for an aunt of theirs who leads a peripatetic existence of the sort.

It was a gift. It was really several gifts and is to be added to this year. She hated the radiator.

The aunt had expressed a dislike of the radiator which always stood in an ugly spot in her room, and one of the nieces had conceived the idea of making her a radiator cover out of cretonne in some soft, inconspicuous pattern.

Another niece (there are four of them) had said "I'll make her a little table cover out of the same. That will make two pretty spots of color."

"I've a good mind to make a bureau scarf of the cretonne and cover it with that coarse scrim hemstitched," said another. "The pattern is shown through just enough to give the effect I think."

COLOR BLINDNESS

When sunlight or daylight passes through a prism, which divides the light into its component colors, the effect is thus shown to consist of a perfect blending of the colors of the rainbow—Red, Orange, Yellow, Green, Blue, Indigo, Violet—and always in that order. You can see these spectral tints in the rainbow or in a miniature rainbow when you spray the garden hose in the sunlight or in the rays of light that pass through the glass prisms in the fringe of the hanging lamp in the parlor over the marble top table near the window if you have access to the chamber of horrors. I say you can see the rainbow—you can if you are not color blind. You distinguish some of the seven distinct tints, but at that there is light beyond the violet—ultra-violet rays—which the human eye cannot see, but which acts upon the camera film, or plate and works other wonders besides.

Dalton, an English chemist, first accurately described his own color-blindness in 1774. He could not distinguish green from red, and to him the rainbow was a mere band of blue and yellow. Imagine what a fright a rosy cheeked lass in a green coat would be to a color blind swain. Blue and yellow—ugh.

One may be born color blind or acquire color-blindness (tobacco users sometimes go color-blind.) One in every twenty-five males is at least partly color-blind, and one in five hundred males is completely color-blind. This explains why a hundred letters to be sent to match something for his boss; he is likely to get only a withering look for his pains. Boys inherit color blindness from their mother, who, though probably not herself color blind, inherited the tendency from her father.

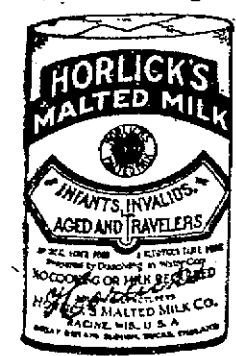

Usually persons totally red-green blind are unaware of their color blindness, and hence only by careful tests of engineers and other seamen and persons engaged in various industries, is color blindness detected. The most satisfactory test is by the candidate a lamb in a dark box, and name white, red, green and blue discs as these are placed before the lamp. An older test is made by giving the candidate a pile of multi-colored skeins of wool and requiring him to match the principle colors in the pile.

In an snare to a dependent you said surgery is the only cure for a bunion. Now I claim that my bunion came after I had chills one winter. When would you recommend to do the operation, and what would it cost? Would one be able to see the foot and hand to business as I am a business woman? If not, how long would it be necessary to keep off the feet?

ANSWER—Your claim is granted. There is no reason why women who have had chills should acquire a bunion afterward as readily as any other woman who wears narrow pointed out turned lasts. Any good surgeon, or if possible, an orthopedic surgeon, to whom your family doctor will refer you. The operation costs from nothing upward, depending on circumstances. Usually the patient must be off the feet two or three weeks.

THE TATTLE.

(First—be it known, that we consider it our obvious duty to say that the author of this queen story was graduated from Punkaun's College in 1792 with the highest honors. After he was discharged from the State Asylum two years later, he began to write odd, strange, incomprehensible stories—all of them works of high imagination. It was an imagination so crooked that rarely an ordinary human being is endowed with in two hundred years. Misfortune, (for the author) kept all his manuscripts under a collar box on his bureau, so the story goes. While he was on a jaunt to a cheese tunnel for atmosphere for a new story, one day, masked woman in red and green snuck into his room and stole the whole bunch of us. Afterwards using them to light her accomplice's pipe. This strange experience was written by the author in 13 volumes, each complete in itself, and 19 editions were sold the first day of publication. However, it is not for us to loose an already famous author but rather to understand and appreciate the zig-zag workings of his mind.—Ed. Morning Glory.)

She wore a lovely crown of chesskin and lovely white upon her head shone a tangle of real linkstones set in platinum. She was a vision de line. "Kitchenette," he cried, mildly, after looking at her for an hour and a half, speechlessly. "Will you be mine?" he asked, after another hour. Just then a dear little boy rushed in and grabbed Kitchenette's skirt. "Grandmother!" he cried. "Won't you make mother give me—"

"Ooof!" barked Harley Wright, doggedly, as he fell into a nearby lake. Years later, when he had fully recovered from the shock of that terrible night, Harley Wright sent the child a twin-twelve eight-shillings Becca-Wacks automobile for a gift.

GOOD RECIPES.
Italian Polenta—Cornmeal mush, made with one cup of cornmeal to four cups of water or milk and water; butter substitute, one tablespoon; grated cheese, one-half cup; strained tomatoes, one-half cup; egg, one; make the cornmeal mush and when quite thick stir in any dry grated or Parmesan cheese. When ready to remove from the fire, add the well-beaten egg, beat two or three minutes, then pour into bread tin wet with cold water. Set aside to cool. When cold cut in half-inch slices and lay in a pan.

Sprinkle with more cheese and bits of fat. Put a layer on top of this and so repeat until the desired amount is in the pan. Bake in a slow oven until the cheese has melted and a crisp coating has formed. Make a sauce of the tomato and one tablespoon each of fat and flour; pour not over the polenta and serve.

Sweet Potato Croquettes.—One cup mashed sweet potato, one-half cup of shredded coconut, one-half cup finely chopped onion, one teaspoon salt, few grains cayenne, one-half cup milk. Mix ingredients, shape in six cylinders, roll in coconut and bake in hot oven until brown. Serve with white sauce.

Cornmeal Crust.—Grease the pie dish well, and sprinkle thickly with dry Indian meal, leaving all that will cling and a trifle more. Having the mixture of pumpkin, milk, eggs, sugar and spices ready as for ordinary pie, pour it in carefully, and bake as usual.

Savory Rice.—Three tablespoons butter or butter substitute, one small onion, one green pepper, one cup rice, one cup water, one quart tomatoes, one and one-half teaspoons salt.

Brown the chopped onion and green pepper in the butter, add the rice and when this is browned add the tomatoes, water and seasoning. Cook until the rice is tender.

TRY THESE.
For Scouring.—A little box may be kept filled with ashes from the stove and used to clean the outside of pots and pans. It is very effective and clean.

Paper Napkins when used to hang over on a high shelf can be cut in half and thus one napkin do the service of two.

Popping Corn.—Put one-third cupful of cooking oil into a frying pan; when hot add almost enough popped corn to cover bottom. Cover pan and shake occasionally while corn is popping.

When the sleeves and necks get worn and ragged and bind armholes, cut the sleeves off and bind the neck, cut the collar off and bind the neck. Sew buttons on each side seam at the bottom and in front to button in. Sew a small piece of material under the collar with little trouble and saves new material.

And this made Mrs. Cow laugh, who, in the story before this, you remember, was ringing her bell, which she carried on a leather collar around her neck, to tell her little calf not to run too far away.

Well, then Billy Bunny came along, so he told Mrs. Cow what Red Head the Woodpecker was doing up in the old orchard. "Yes, he's making a nice little house for Mr. Red Head," said the little rabbit. "Everybody is working but me. I'm just hopping around doing nothing," and he sighed a great big sigh and scratched his left ear with his right hind foot.

"You're the first person I ever met who longed for work," laughed Mrs. Cow. Up to the farm the men are grumbling all the time about getting up with Mr. Happy Sun and working all day."

And just then Jimmy Jay flew by.

"Why don't you build a house for yourself, Billy Bunny?"

"I don't need one," said the little rabbit. "The Old Brier Patch is where I live."

"But everybody is building a home this spring," went on Jimmy Jay. "Why don't you get to work?" and the mischievous little bluejay picked off a hard round bud and threw it at the little rabbit. And then off he flew, singing:

"Some folks are so lazy. They never do a thing. But bother everybody. Who's busy in the spring?"

"I wonder if he means me," thought the little rabbit. "Oh, dear me! I wonder if he means me!" said the little rabbit out loud, for he felt so badly by this time that he couldn't keep it to himself.

"If he does he isn't telling the truth," said Robbie Redbreast. "He's a mischief maker," said another voice, and there stood little Dickey Meadow Mouse. Don't let him worry you, little rabbit. The Reward of Kindness.
The unusual feature of an individual devising all his efforts to his business partner to the exclusion of his children, and not preserving any estate to devise is contained in the will of a Chicago citizen, which was admitted to probate recently. The testator left all he possessed to his partner. In explanation of his action the testament reads: "My reasons for this are that what worldly possessions I have are due entirely to the generosity of my partner and I feel that I only have a life interest. Although it would be a pleasure to leave my children something—in other circumstances—as I am I must be just. They are young and able." The petition accompanying the document states, however, that the decedent, a Hebrew, left no estate.

CHAPTER VI.

The meeting of Daphne and her new sister-in-law was not what either would have expected or selected. Daphne was tired in body and soul, discouraged, footsore and disheartened about her love and her lover. She had reached the door of the apartment in the mood of a wave-buffed, outswum castaway, eager for nothing but to lie down in the sand and sleep.

Daphne could imagine the feelings of her brother's wife when she reached her home after a long ocean voyage, a night landing, the custom-house ordeal, and the cab ride among the luggage, and found a mother-in-law asleep in her bed and a sister-in-law yet to arrive!

Bayard and Lella, serene in the belief that Daphne and her mother had gone back to Cleveland, entered the apartment without formality and went about switching on lights, recovering their little home from the night with tangle instantaneous.

Mother Kip's awakening came from the light that Bayard flashed in his bedroom. Lella had a lovely disposition, but she was tired, and all the way up in the overlanded cab she had thought longingly of the beautiful bed in her own new home, and had promised herself a quick plunge into it for a long stay. How could she rejoice to find a strange woman there—even though she bore the sacred name of mother-in-law?

Mother Kip ordered Bayard and Lella out of their own room and when she was ready to be seen she had so many apologies to make and accept that the meeting entirely lacked the rapture it should have expressed. Even a mother could hardly be glad to see her son in such discouraging circumstances. All three exchanged questions more and more perfunctorily, and kept repeating themselves. "The most popular question was, 'I wonder where Daphne is?'"

They could not know that she was hobnobbing down the wilderness of Riverside drive. She, too, was thinking longingly of her bed. But long before she reached it her mother had moved in and established herself across a good deal more than half of it. It was a smallish bed in a smallish bedroom.

Lella fell asleep in her tub and might have drowned without noticing the difference if her yawning husband had not saved her life—and very cleverly: he was too tired to lift her from the water, so he lifted the stopper and let the water escape from her. She at-most resented the rescue, but eventually got herself to bed in a prettily sulky stupor.

From some infinite depth of peace she was dragged up protesting. Bayard was telling her of Daphne's arrival. Dazedly she began to prepare an elaborate toilet, but Bayard halted her out before she was ready. This was the final test of Lella's patience and of Daphne's.

It was a tribute to both that they hated the collision more than each other. Their greetings were appropriately emotional and noisy, and they both talked at once in a manner that showed a certain congeniality.

It was a Tribute to Both That They Hated the Collision More Than Each Other.

When at length Daphne went to her room she observed her mother's extra-territorial holdings. She stretched herself along the narrow coastline in despair of rest. But she was too tired to worry or be awake and she slept thoroughly.

The next morning the three women, about to meet one another by daylight, made their preparations with the scrupulous anxiety of candidates for presentation at court. In consequence, breakfast was late and the only man there, except the evanescent waiter from the restaurant below, was Bayard.

A troop of business worries like a swarm of gnats had awakened him early. He had escaped some of them in Europe, for the honeymoon had been a prolonged and hectic interlude in his office hours; but marriage was not his career. His career was his work, and that was recalling him, rebuking him, as with far-off bugle alarms.

He was so restless that he merely glanced at the headlines of the paper. He was preoccupied when he kissed his mother and Daphne good morning, and he paced up and down the dining room like a caged leopard till Lella arrived.

Her trousseau had included boudoir gowns of the most ravishing description and she wore her best one to breakfast. Daphne and Mrs. Kip made all the desirable exclamations at the cost and the cut of it. Even Bayard paid her a tribute.

"Isn't she a dream, mother? Aren't you proud of her, Daph?" They agreed that she was and they were, and Bayard drew his chair up to the table with pride.

It was the bride's last breakfast and the housewife's first. That is, Lella, was not really a housewife; only an apartment wife, with nearly everything done for her except the spending of her time. She had to spend her own time.

This breakfast was the funeral of the honeymoon, and Lella hung with graceful dejection over the coffee cup. It might have been a cup of hemlock, judging from the posture of her woe. But the he-brute, attracted by a portion of a headline, had his newspaper and was gulping it down with his coffee.

He was so absorbed in the mere clash of two Mexican generals and the danger of American intervention that he forgot the all-important demands of love, and ignored the appalling fact that he had only a few minutes left before he must take his departure.

It was a pitiful awakening to the new Mrs. Kip. She was being taught that she was not important enough to keep her husband's mind or his body close at home. He had said that she was all the world to him, and, behold! she was only a part of it. He had said that he could think of nothing else and desired nothing else but her. Now he had her and he was thinking of everything else. He had to have a newspaper to tell him all about everything in the world.

The sight of Lella's anguish over the breakfast obsequies of the honeymoon chilled Daphne's hope of marriage bliss like a frost ravaging among peach blossoms.

Her sympathies would ordinarily have been with her brother in any dispute between him and his wife. But this was a dispute between Bayard and love. It was sacrilegious for him to go on reading the Times when his bride had so much more important things to discuss. He heard her discuss them as through a morning paper jar, and he made the wrong answers, and finally he snatched out of his watch, glared it in the face, gasped, and attacked the last of his breakfast like a train-catcher at a lunch-counter.

It was thus that he heard Lella wail, "What's to become of me all morning?"

Bayard stared at her sharply, but spoke softly enough: "Why, I don't know, honey. There ought to be plenty for you to do. The Lord knows there's enough for me at the office."

"All right," sighed Lella. "I'll be brave and worry through somehow, till noon, with my sweet new sister's help. But we'll come down and lunch with you. About what time do you go out to luncheon, Bay?"

Bayard's answer was discouraging: "This is one of the three days a week when the heads of the firm always lunch at Delmonico's in a private room. I'm afraid I can't lunch with you to-day."

"And you'll leave me this whole terrible day? I can never exist so long without you."

"I'm mighty sorry, honey. But men must work, and so-forth. I've been away too long. The office needs me. And I've spent a lot of money, and I've got to go down and earn some more to buy pretty things for my beauty."

This brightened her in a way he had not expected, and a little too far beyond his hopes. Gloom left her face like a cloud whipped from before the sun. She dazzled him with her smile.

"Oh, I know what to do! Daphne and your mother and I can go shopping."

Bayard's heart stopped. He wondered what on earth more there was in the shops that she could want to buy. She had come to the marriage with her trousseau only partly completed, on account of the haste of the wedding. But she had bought and bought in Europe. She had made his honeymoon anxious by her rapacity for beautiful things to wear. And now that they had come to New York with their old trunks bulging and new trunks bought abroad bulging, and had paid a thumping sum at the custom house, now she was still eager to go shopping!

What he wanted to do was to quit buying for a while and sell something. He did not say this. Love was slipping the bandage off one eye; but it had not yet removed the sugar stick that stops the tongue from criticism.

Lella grew more cheerful at a terrifying rate: "Go on to your old luncheon, my dear child, and Daphne and your mother and I will go on a spree in the shops. Then we'll all have a banquet tonight and a theater, and if you're very good I'll take you to one of those dancing places afterward. I'll buy the theater tickets myself. I'll get good ones. I want to save you as much trouble as I can, honey. So run along to your office and don't worry about us. But you must miss me—frantically! Will you?"

He vowed that he would, and he meant it. She was a most misable creature.

He rose to leave, but she stopped him to say, "What play shall we see?" This was the occasion for elaborate debate till Bayard gave signs of trumpeting his wrath and bolting.

Lella graciously released him only to call him back to say that he had forgotten his newspaper.

"I left it for you. Don't you want to read it?" he asked. "I can get another at the subway station."

She shook her head: "There's nothing interesting in the papers. I'm just from Paris, and I know more about the fashions than they do."

Bayard shuddered a little, truly. The times were epic. Immortal progress was being made as never before; ancient despots were turning into republics, republics were at war with one another; constitutions, labor problems, life problems, all social institutions, were being ripped up and remade, all the relations of masters and men, mistresses, children, wives, animals.

Yet Lella said there was nothing in the papers! Revolutionary news meant to her a change in the fashion in sleeves, the shift of the equatorial waistline a trifle nearer the bust or a trifle nearer the hips, the release of the ankles from tight skirts. The great rebellion in her world was the abrupt decision of the dressmakers that after years of costumes clinging more and more closely to the human outline they would depart from it in every way possible. Lella was interested vitally in what women would wear and what they would leave off, and grandly indifferent to which nations were shooting at which. Bayard hesitated, appealed again to his watch, gasped at the hour and the minutes, kissed Lella violently, kissed Daphne and kissed his mother and rushed for the door. Lella put out her arms again.

"I must be last," she cried, and as he bowed into her arms she kissed his ear and whispered, "and first, too, and all the betweens."

Bayard was a business man from his cradle days. He loved promptitude. He blushed to arrive late at his office and set a bad example to his stenographers and clerks. It was his creed that success comes to those who arrive earlier on the battlefield than the others, fight harder, stay longest there, and end every day with the next day's maneuvers clearly realized as part of the next month's campaign.

There was need for concentration in his business, for he had brought back from Europe a sense of great disaster in the air. And there was no encouragement in American business except an instinctive feeling that the worst must be over because it had lasted so long.

WORKING ON WELLAND CANAL.

The resumption of work on the Welland Canal is one of the first plans for insuring employment. The deepening of the canal is an important public work, one of the productive kind. The recent opening of the new, deep Erie Canal is diverting more and more of our export grain to the United States, and Canada needs a deep waterway through the lower Great Lakes system to hold its own.—Toronto Mail and Empire.

Dinner Stories

The sailor, returning a trifle saturated found his hitherto respected and respectable ship camouflaged in the most modern cubist style. Running his eye over the whole mass of conflicting squares, triangles, lines, circles and sundry other nameless bolts of paint which graced the sides of his "home," and blinking stupidly at the hideous screaming color scheme, he slowly raised his hand, while the tears coursed down his cheeks, and murmured wearily, "Never again!"

Food Controller Hoover told at a mealless-wheatless banquet a story about a poultry profiteer. "A lady entered his shop," said Mr. Hoover, "and asked the price of chicken. 'Them birds in the window,' said the profiteer. 'What, they're very fine quality stock. I can't let 'em go for less than 94 cents a pound.' 'Indeed!' said the lady, 'did you raise them yourself?'" "Yep," said the profiteer.

absently. "They were 70 cents yesterday."

"My little boy is ill, doctor. Can you come at once?" queried the father.

"Sorry, but I shan't be able to get around under an hour."

"For heaven's sake, do! It may be a case of life or death."

"Why, it is as bad as all that?"

"Not yet. But my wife's got ideas of her own on what to do if I should not find you in, and I am afraid she will do it."

"You ask for my daughter? What are your prospects, young man? Do you own the house you live in?" demanded fatherly but I have five tons of coal in the cellar."

"Take her."

Tells How to Stop a Bad Cough

Surprising results from this famous old home-made syrup. Easily prepared and costs little.

If you have a severe cough or chest cold accompanied with soreness, throat tickle, hoarseness, or difficult breathing, or if your child wakes up during the night with croup and you want quick help, try this reliable old home-made cough remedy. Any druggist can supply you with 2½ ounces of Pinex.

Pour this into a pint bottle and fill the bottle with plain granulated sugar syrup. Or you can use clarified molasses, honey, or corn syrup instead of sugar syrup, if desired. This recipe makes a pint of really remarkable cough remedy. It tastes good, and in spite of its low cost, it can be depended upon to give quick and lasting relief.

You can feel this take hold of a cough in a way that means business. It loosens and raises the phlegm, stops throat tickle and soothes and heals the irritated membranes that line the throat and bronchial tubes with such promptness, ease and certainty that it is really astonishing.

Pinex is a special and highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, and is probably the best known means of overcoming severe coughs, throat and chest colds.

There are many worthless imitations of this mixture. To avoid disappointment, ask for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with full directions and don't accept anything else. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money promptly refunded. The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

ALMOST DIED FROM STOMACH TROUBLE

Mr. Campbell lost 66 Pounds. Regained it, and tells how he got well.

"Before I started taking Milks Emulsion, the doctor told me I wasn't any use, for I was going to die. But if you could see me now, you wouldn't think that there had ever been anything the matter with me. I was in bed, flat on my back, when I commenced taking Milks Emulsion. I had lost 66 pounds. I have regained my health and strength. I don't look like the same man I did three years ago. I wish you could see what it has done for me and my family."—W. J. Campbell, Carey, Ohio.

Thousands of people who "had to be careful with their diet" or "had to use dietaries" have found Milks Emulsion the one thing they needed for quick relief and lasting benefit. It is guaranteed, hence, to be true. Milks Emulsion is a pleasant nutritive food and a corrective medicine. It restores healthy, natural blood action, doing away with all need of pills and physics. It promotes appetite and quickly puts the digestive organs in shape to assimilate food. As a builder of flesh and strength, Milks Emulsion is strongly recommended to run-down nervous people, and it has produced amazing results in many cases of asthma, chronic bronchitis, and tuberculosis of the lungs. Chronic stomach trouble and constipation are promptly relieved—usually in one day.

This is the only solid emulsion made, and so palatable that it is eaten with a spoon like ice cream. A truly wonderful medicine for weak, sickly children. No matter how severe your case, you are urged to try Milks Emulsion under this guarantee—Take six bottles home with you, use it according to directions, and if not satisfied with the results, your money will be promptly refunded. Price 60c and $1.25 per bottle. The Milks Emulsion Co., Terre Haute, Ind. Sold and guaranteed by J. F. Baker.

The Two Paths

By ELMORE DRURY

Copyright, 1918, Western Newspaper Union.

It was a supreme hour with Helen Rossiter. She stood alone in her rather pretty and comfortable room in a good grade city boarding house, turning over and over in her hand a flashing gem-studded pin, the velvet case that had contained it and a brief note lying on the stand at her side. The pretty trinket fascinated her, yet Helen knew that she had no right to accept it.

She was an ambitious girl, had received a thorough commercial college education and had come to the busy, bustling metropolis six months previous to find her fondest dreams realized.

"You are the luckiest girl I ever knew," a friend had said to her, and Helen had quite flushed with satisfaction and triumph as she realized the fact as true. She had obtained work at the start in the employ of an aggressive, up-to-date mail-order concern operated by a Mr. Andre Leston, a man who was liberal, almost extravagant where the investment of a dollar brought two. He was of expensive tastes and surrounded himself with persons who shared his free lance business ideas. He had been married and divorced twice, but was in no sense a bad man at heart. He took the world as it came, and when his wives tired of him gave them a generous stipend and did not break his heart over their departure.

There were frequent banquets, then parties and offerings given to his employees. Always there was a chaparron for the young ladies and everything was circumspet. In the office, boxes of chocolates and flowers were common. Leston counted upon it that this profusion would influence those he employed to give their best work in return. Helen was paid good wages, but earning all she was paid for.

She had too pure and sensible a mind, however, not to see that the atmosphere was unhealthy, evanescent, deteriorating. The acceptance of the friendship of a divorcee, the general impulse of enjoyment reckless of its purposeless results, the flare, the glitter, a price to pay in world weariness at the end—all this assailed a finer strain of mentality with Helen. Mr. Leston had paid her marked attention.

"He wants to marry you," the head stenographer told Helen. "Why not? He has money. He may in time be neglectful, but never unkind. Feather your nest—it is the way of the world."

And now upon her birthday a delicate note had accompanied the expensive gift, which Helen knew she must not retain. She sighed as she fitted the pin back in its case and idly read a note thanking Mr. Leston, but declining the present. Then she thought of home and mother—of quiet and peace—of Waltham, of the humble, but happy friends she had left there, and most of all, of staunch, honest-hearted Ned Barclay, who loved her, as she knew, although he had never told her so.

The landlady came up with a telegram that put Helen in a transport of delight. It was from her cousin at the town thirty miles distant, "on his way to do some shopping." It read: "Meet a day off and chaperone me."

What a day they had together, she said. Lucia Davenport! They arrived home, graying chatting about eight o'clock. The landlady, quivering with excitement, met Helen at the door.

"Some one to see you, Miss Rossiter," she said, and pushed open the door leading into the two long parlors of the suite. A wild babel assailed the bewildered Helen. There were over a dozen of her home town friends. The room was trimmed with pretty leaves, upon a table were apples, nuts, popcorn, a promising plenty of real home products, mince and pumpkin pies, real pound cakes—a birthday surprise offering, and Helen actually broke down and cried.

She was glad to welcome Ned Barclay among her guests. There were old-fashioned games and at midnight the gay visitors left for their train, leaving Helen flushed and happy, half yearning to go along with them. Ned Barclay had lingered.

"Helen," he said, and he drew a little package from his pocket, "back home I always brought to you a sample of the first maple sugar run," and as she opened the tissue paper there was the sample, made in a heart-shaped mold and tied with a pretty ribbon. Her eyes were humid as she passed it on the mantel and thanked him. Then the light of a strange resolve came into her eyes.

"Did you come by train?" she inquired.

"Not while old Tim is fit for harness," laughed Ned.

"Can I—could you find room for me lying back?"

"Could I? Oh, Helen! You don't mean to Waltham!"

"Yes, I do—home and mother. Wait just a moment," and she took letter and jewel case, went down to the landlady and returned with sparkling eyes. "I'm ready," she announced, and taking up the sugar heart placed it carefully in her hand bag.

She had chosen her path, and oh, so clearly and joyously she looked into the future, and she and Ned, hand in hand, were pursuing it to its end!

FIRST U. S. OFFICER TO ENTER BERLIN

Brig. Gen. George H. Harries.

Brig. Gen. Harries, former commander of the National Guard of the District of Columbia was the first American officer to enter Berlin since the war began. The honor was accorded him in recognition of his excellent work in unloading and dispatching troops at Brest.

FIRST U. S. WOMAN TO VISIT THE MARNE

Mrs. George Barnett.

Mrs. George Barnett, wife of the commandant of the U. S. Marine Corps, was the first American woman to visit the Marne battlefields after the engagements of the Americans there. She decorated with flowers many of the graves of American heroes there. Mrs. Barnett was summoned abroad suddenly some time ago by the illness of her husband. Her son, Basil Gordon, is a lieutenant in the marines.

America's Answer the wonderful war picture prepared by the United States Government, will be shown at the Lyric Theater Sunday afternoon and evening under the auspices of the Local Council of Defense. The afternoon picture will be shown at 3 o'clock and the evening picture will be shown at 8:30. This is a wonderful film and it was thought advisable to hold two performances to accommodate all who would like to attend.

All soldiers, sailors and Marines, who reside in this community and who have been mustered out of the service are invited by the local council of defense to register with its Secretary, C. A. Hoan.

The public schools will be closed from Dec. 20 to January 5th for vacation.

Whitewater News

Whitewater, Dec. 19.—A cablegram from Henry Fuller announces that he is now in a hospital in England, is rapidly recovering from his wound and expects to be home soon.

A recent letter from Phil Frautman tells of the death of Corp. Walter Thomas, who was killed in a terrific battle three days before the armistice. Walter lived in Palmyra, but went with Company K from Whitewater. He was a nephew of Mrs. Maud Williams of this city.

Mrs. Lawrence Hickey died at her home on Summit street Tuesday morning. Her husband succumbed to the influenza Monday, and two small children are deprived of their parents within two days.

The Congregational Ladies Union held the regular missionary meeting yesterday afternoon. Mrs. E. T. Cass conducted the devotional services; Miss Rena Weld read items of current missionary news. Mrs. P. N. Leenhouts gave the present conditions in India relative to the servitude of women; Mrs. Geo. Ferris read a paper on progress in India, as being developed by our missionaries through agriculture and Miss Mary McCutcheon gave a report of the jubilee meeting of the W. B. M. D. at Oak Park, which she recently attended. In her report she mentioned the fact that both Whitewater and Wisconsin went over the top in raising their apportionment of the Golden Jubilee Fund.

Mrs. Scott Salisbury entertained

eight of her friends at a luncheon Monday.

Howard Finch is visiting relatives at Madison.

Lawrence Clark of Waukesha, is visiting at the home of his grandfather, Charles Clark.

DRILL IS SUSPENDED FOR REST OF MONTH

Captain E. C. Baumann of Co. G has received orders for the suspension of drills and meetings for instruction during December is authorized by an order from Adjutant General Holway to state guard officers. The influenza epidemic already has prevented regular drills in many company stations. Captain Baumann will not cancel the drill for next Monday owing to the fact that a dance is to be held, but the drill for the 30th will not be held.

After Jan. 1 drills will be resumed. Correspondence schools for officers will open. Gallery practice instruction will be undertaken.

A non-commissioned officers' school is suggested in the future policy of the state guard. Greater need for maintenance of present state forces during demobilization and reconstruction is emphasized in the new instructions. It is not expected any unit of the old Wisconsin National Guard will return before July or August. It is therefore urged that every effort be used to improve the present state forces.

Around the State

Rifle Club Organized.—Neenah.—With E. E. Lampert, bank cashier as president and already upwards of twenty-five members enrolled, the Twin City Rifle club was organized here. The club will hold regular shoots on the rifle range.

Killed in Action.—Neenah.—Positive proof has been received here of the death in action of Sergt. Joseph Hubbard, a member of Company I. Letter from one of his companions tells of his attending Hubbard's funeral.

POLITICAL FATE OF BRITAIN'S PREMIER WILL BE DECIDED AT COMING ELECTION

Lloyd George and H. H. Asquith.

The general election to be held in Great Britain this month will decide the political fate of Premier Lloyd George, who, although he gained power as a Liberal, now draws his chief support from the Conservatives. Should Lloyd George be defeated at the polls former Premier H. H. Asquith, leader of the bulk of the Liberals, probably would return to power.

"SILK" O'LAUGHLIN
REPORTED VERY SICK

(By Associated Press.) Boston, Mass., Dec. 19.—Francis ("Silk") O'Laughlin, American league umpire is dangerously ill with double pneumonia at his home here. He was stricken with influenza last Friday and the disease quickly developed into pneumonia. The last rites of the church have been administered.

Sport Snap Shots

MORRIS MILLER

When the Intercollegiate Association of Amateur Athletes of America meets in the great in about two weeks, it is expected that a suggestion of Walter Camp in regard to perpetuating the name of Johnny Overton, the great Yale athlete who was killed in France, will be adopted. Mr. Camp suggests that the annual Intercollegiate cross-country race be named the John W. Overton Perpetual Trophy Race. Overton was a runner of this event in 1915 and again in 1916, and was one of the greatest long distance runners of recent years. The Meadowbrook club of Philadelphia has already changed the name of its annual fixture from the Meadowbrook Mile to the Johnny Overton Mile.

Among the veterans at the National league gathering in New York recently was Jack Lynch, who was famous as the pitcher of the champion St. Louis Cardinals in 1884. Lynch is 64 years old and still enjoys rugged health. He boasts of a pitching record which he established forty years ago.

"When I was with the New Bedford club, managed by Frank Bancroft back in 1878, I pitched three games in one day," said Lynch. "The first game began at 8 o'clock in the morning at New Bedford, the second started at 11 o'clock in Taunton, and the third was played in Providence at 2 o'clock in the afternoon. The first two were nine innings each, and the third lasted fifteen innings. I won all of them and felt as fine as silk when I went to supper!"

Following the announcement that the Yankees would probably forsake Macdon, Cal., as a training camp and move along to Florida, comes the announcement that the Giants are likely to do their spring work in the same state. As it is customary for the clubs training close to each other to arrange interleague games in the spring it is possible that the teams of McGraw and Tugans will come together in a set of games in the southland before the opening of the regular season. The Braves and Phillies will train in Florida, also the Mackmen, so there promises to be plenty of pre-season activity of the interleague variety in that state.

Walter R. Dickson, a pitcher formerly in the Texas and Southern leagues and at one time a trial with the New York Giants and the Boston Braves, died at his home in Ardmore, Okla., of influenza. He was 32 years of age and had been playing ball since 1905. He was with New York in 1910 and with Boston in 1912. His last engagement was with Houston in 1917. He did not play last season.

The Newark club of the new International league is homeless and cannot play ball next year unless a new park is constructed. The owners of the old grounds in Newark which were used by the new Internationals last season have sold half the property to a neighboring industrial plant, so that only a part of the infield remains.

According to a report from Chicago, the first new player to be signed for the White Sox for the 1919 campaign is a first baseman named John Conroy, who played down in the Copper Country league last season. Manager Rowland, signed Conroy on the recommendation of Harry Kane, former pitcher and umpire, who has been keeping tab on pitchers in New Mexico and Arizona.

"CAP STUBBS"

THE FLOPPER

Last summer when many big league players evaded the draft by jumping their teams and entering the employ of shipyards the magnates announced in loud and gruff tones that these men never would be allowed to play again on their teams. League action to bar these jumpers from the circuits was urged. It looked as though the chicken-hearted players would get the punishment they deserved.

But that's all off. At the American league meeting recently no concerted action against these men was taken. Most of the magnates expressed their desire to bid on these players if their clubs put them on the market. About that time the owners of these slacker-stars decided they wouldn't want the other fellow to get 'em.

So, it's all over, boys, you can lay down your tools and wait for the call to the balmy southern breezes net spring.

HUNTING FACTS OF
UNUSUAL INTEREST

It is unlawful in Michigan, while hunting, to skin or otherwise destroy the identity of any bird.

North Dakota, by statute, has authorized private individuals to establish enclosed game preserves of not less than two acres for the propagation of deer, elk and antelope.

Leave some game in the woods for the boys who are "over there." Don't try to shoot everything.

Conserve the forests. Forest fires can be avoided by taking ordinary precautions.

Bears are given protection in Alaska, Arkansas, California, Louisiana, Minnesota, Pennsylvania, Washington and five counties in Oklahoma.

Pheasants to the number of 23,388 were imported in 1911. Today not a pheasant is coming into the country, and for a year or so before the United States entered the war very few came in.

Grand squirrels caused $65,000 damage to crops on Union Islands, Cal., this year. They could have been eradicated for an expenditure of $10,000 and an outlay of $1,000 a year thereafter would insure continued freedom. By forethought the agricultural resources could be conserved. This is highly important.

FOOTBALL COST NINE LIVES.

Chicago—Football claimed the lives of nine players during the 1918 season, three less than the 1917 toll, nine less than in 1916, and seven under the number in 1915, according to figures compiled by the Associated Press.

Virtually all of the victims were "free lance" players, not participating in games conducted under college and university physical direction. Some of them had only limited knowledge of the game.

The figures will continue to decrease until fatalities in America's roughest outdoor game have been entirely eliminated," said A. A. Stagg, the veteran football coach at the University of Chicago. "The greatest menace to the game is the lack of proper training and proper physical examination. While some of the larger high schools now require physical examination, in most of the smaller cities this is entirely ignored."

CHAMPIONS ENROLL
AS K. OF C. SECRETARIES

If the Knights of Columbus continue choosing their overseas secretaries from the ranks of the champions in the sporting field there will soon be a dearth of champions in this country. The latest recruit for K. of C. service abroad is George T. Lamoth, champion master-at-arms with the sword, bayonet and foil. With these weapons Mr. Lamoth has never been defeated and he has met many of the most skillful men in this line in the world. For the past nine years Mr. Lamoth has served as gymnasium instructor and fencing master at the 74th Regiment Armory in Buffalo.

Amongst the other champions, in their respective lines, sent overseas as Knights of Columbus secretaries may be mentioned: William J. Varley, double sculls; Jack McLaughlin, lightweight pugilist and Michael P. Dugan, revolver marksman.

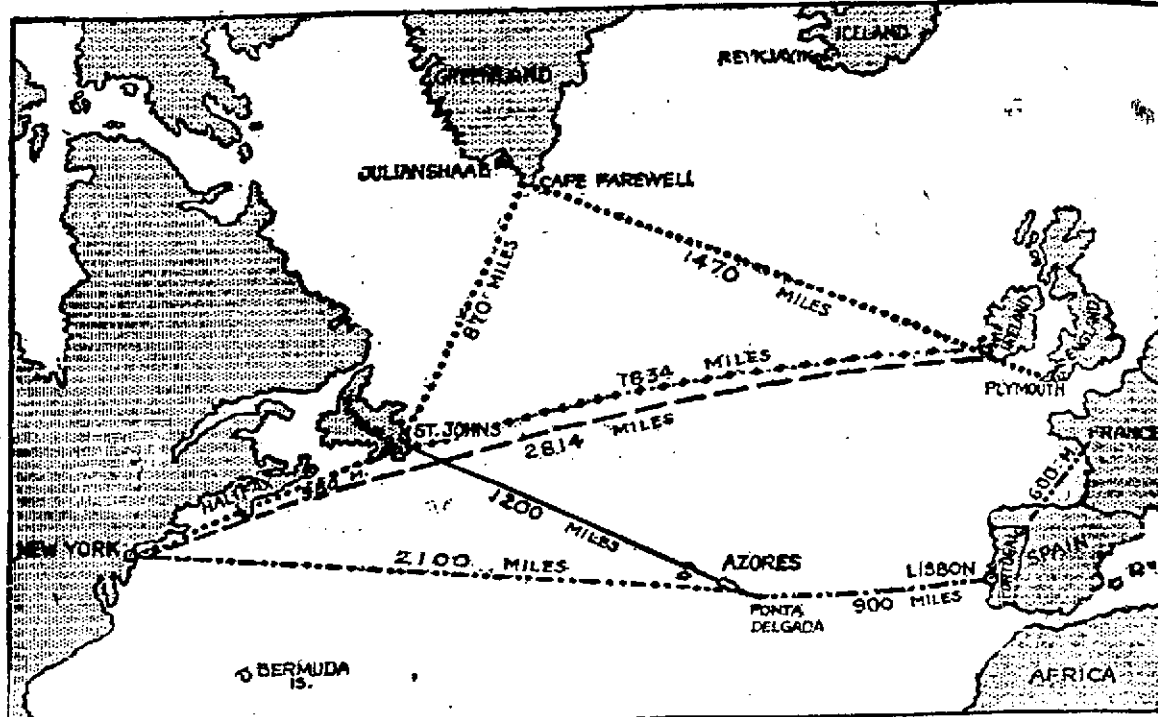

Many other notables in the athletic world are in Knights of Columbus overseas secretarial duty. Johnny Evers, Jack Hendricks, Bill McCabe, Jack Noonan are among those who helped out baseball on the map abroad for the Knights; Billy Roche is engaged in refereeing bouts in England and France; Jimmy Wyford is arranging bouts at the different camps; Elz Mokey is staging exhibitions and boxing for the entertainment of Pershing's soldiers; Sam Fitzpatrick, sport promoter and manager of pugilists, sails next week; Tim Leonard is conducting athletic contests in France and a great many other athletes, promoters, managers and "all round" sportsmen are doing "their bit" over there in K. of C. Secretaries' uniforms.

Potato Gossip.

Madison—The greatest losses in Wisconsin's potato crop this year were due to field frosting and bruising, according to R. E. Vaughn of the college of agriculture.

Field frosting, which appears in the potato as gray, discolored lines at the stem end, has caused the greatest potato loss this year," says Mr. Vaughn. "The potatoes were not frozen sufficiently to become soft but were chilled. Some of them are rather wilted as a result. Bruising has been responsible for potato losses also, but both the frosting and bruising can easily be avoided next year by care."

FIRST TRANSATLANTIC FLIGHT NOW SEEMS TO BE A CERTAINTY

Map showing possible overseas airplane routes. It is freely predicted that the great new flying boats now being manufactured in America soon will fly across the Atlantic. They are capable of making 160 miles an hour and of covering 3,000 miles without a stop. It is only 1,834 miles from St. John's, Newfoundland, to the west coast of Ireland.

Ostrich Hatching.

Madison—The last ostrich hatch of the season is in progress now at the poultry farm of the Wisconsin experiment station. Four baby ostriches are out of the shell; two more may come. Thirty-two ostriches have been hatched this year, which makes a total of 62 within the last two years. This is the pioneer work for captive birds in an ordinary incubator. The work has been under the supervision of O. N. Johnson of the poultry department but the ostriches are turned over to the "zoo" at one of the city farms after they are hatched.

Guilty of Espionage.

Madison—Frank Kesow of Cassel, arrested recently for violation of the espionage act, pleaded guilty in federal court and was fined $500.

Christian Dipple of North Freedom have been placed under arrest for violation of the espionage act. Disloyal utterances are charged in both cases with attempt to cause insubordination, mutiny and refusal of duty as alleged against Ochener.

MIGHT HAVE HAD CONVULSIONS.

A special dispatch from Washington says that the "capital reeled under the shock of Secretary McAdoo's resignation." Wonder what sort of convulsions would have taken place had George Creel resigned.—Leadville, Herald Democrat.

Issues Proclamation.

Madison—Gov. Philipp on Tuesday issued a proclamation calling upon the people to assist in the care of "The Fatherless Children" of France.

THE FRANKLIN SEDAN

Offers The Utmost In Motoring Satisfaction

Maximum comfort and service, at minimum cost and trouble—that briefly is what constitutes motoring satisfaction.

And such satisfaction is the product of certain definite principles of construction that are found in larger measure in the Franklin Sedan than in any other fine enclosed car.

These principles are Light Weight, Simplicity and Flexibility. Through them the Franklin Sedan is enabled to deliver consistently—18 to 20 miles to the gallon of gasoline instead of the usual 8.

10,000 miles to the set of tires—instead of the usual 5,000.

And with this remarkable efficiency comes also an ease of handling and a degree of riding comfort unknown in the heavy, rigid enclosed car. Over all roads, the Franklin Sedan rides as smoothly and safely as a touring car.

Motoring annoyances, too, are reduced to the lowest point. Franklin Direct Air Cooling eliminates at once the many worries so common to the water-cooled car, and offers instead a system with which there is nothing to freeze, heat up, or get out of order.

See these features in the car itself. Its distinctive design and artistic appointments emphasize its fineness.

BROTHERHOOD HELD MONTHLY MEETING

About eighty men were served with a delicious supper last evening, at a regular monthly meeting of the Methodist Brotherhood of the Cargill Methodist church. The meal was served in the dining room of the church at seven o'clock by the Senior Standard Bearers, group No. 1, with Mrs. Bert Beck in charge.

A men's quartette consisting of Messrs Van Pool, Bearmore, J. S. Taylor and George Paris, sang several selections which were well enjoyed. It had been planned that Dr. T. W. Nuzum should address the men outlining some of the problems confronting the profession in keeping the soldiers at the front, but he was called out of the city on professional business, and was unable to be present.

Rev. Miller, who was present, was called on for an informal talk and he gave an interesting account of a trip made by him some years ago, over the ground covered by the battle lines in Europe.

The towns of France and Belgium which have become famous in history were described by him in an entertaining way. Brussels, Paris, Calais, Coblentz and Cologne were mentioned by him and brief characteristics noted. All of his talk was enlivened by personal reminiscences which made it very enjoyable.

After this informal address, a report was called for from the various teams who have been making a canvass of the society, to secure funds for making improvements and repairs to the church building. The report was made by the various teams and the report of the committee given last evening showed that already the society had decided to make a drive for funds, having in view the sum of $5,000, as necessary for the plans in mind. Dishonest Servants.
An Evening News, in an article on the dishonesty of servants, long served in old houses, case of an aged woman who had been continuously in a great family for half a century and had appropriated all kinds of property, among which was a picture which was recovered by the heir of the house and sold to America for $150,000. The News asks: "How is it to be accounted for that a fine Rubens should be found decorating the parlour of a farmhouse in Lincolnshire; curtains embroidered by Mary Queen of Scots, a tiny cottage in Norfolk, and a magnificent bureau on the collection at Windsor castle, obscure village in Shropshire? hat a bundle of linen, each piece of which is marked with the monogram Charles I. was disposed of some years ago at a local sale in the west of England is less difficult to explain—Cromwell, together with members of his family, frequently visited the house from which the sheets came, and possibly brought them from one of the royal palaces."

SENIOR TEAM DEFEATS SOPHOMORES 19 TO 5

The Senior basketball team easily defeated the Sophomores yesterday and won the championship of the school by a 19 to 5 score. The playing of the Sophomores was much better than was expected, the first half ending with the score 6 to 5 in favor of the Seniors.

In the first half the upper class men used two substitutes who in the second half were replaced by Nuzum and Sprackling. Immediately the Seniors began scoring and ran up a total of thirteen points until they were stopped by the Sophs.

The team work of the Sophs was far better than that displayed by the Seniors and was the main reason why the score was so low. Time after time they carried the ball down the floor, past the guards of their opponents. Hager, their captain, played a remarkably fine game, making one basket and one free throw. The other basket was scored by Hager. For the Seniors, Allan Sprackling and Nuzum played the best game.

The Seniors will now play the faculty, who will play W. P. Craig, physical director of the "Y". The game promises to be a good one.

The lineup of yesterday's game follows:

VINDICTIVE CAPTAIN VISITS IN AMERICA

 Captain Fred F. B. Carpenter.

The True Friend

By Oulla Francis Pfeiffer
 (Copyright, 1918, Western Newspaper Union.)
 "I give up the struggle. There does not appear to be a ray of hope, present or future."
 Warren Burr uttered a deep sigh and folded up a one-sheet memorandum he had been looking over. It contained the names of a dozen or more persons and a pencil line was drawn through most of them.
 "I won't try to see the others," he soliloquized. "It would be no use. There isn't one of those relatives who has not received favors from me in the past."
 Burr went to the little railway depot at Hopeton to find that he had missed the last train north, the direction he was going in. He made an inquiry as to a hotel. There was none. Then, suddenly, memory flashed a token of the past across his mind.
 "I wonder what ever became of the Bertrams?" he cogitated. "When David Bertram, my old partner, died, I sent a trifle to his widow, for I heard that he had left her none too well provided with this world's goods. I wonder if the family still live here," and he proceeded to make inquiries.
 Yes, he was told. Mrs. Bertram had two little children and with her aged mother lived in the old homestead. Burr's informant spoke of Mrs. Bertram with a good deal of zest and admiration.
 "A fine, capable woman," ran the encomium. "When her husband died it wasn't a very easy road for her for a time, but she managed to pull through with perseverance and industry. She's cleared the home, let a neighbor work her eighty acres on shares, makes quite a bit out of her orchard and berry patch and is getting along nicely."
 Burr was sincerely glad of the good news. He had known Lella Bertram when she was a girl. He and her husband had been the closest of friends.
 He was not disappointed in his hope and faith. Neat and still girlish in some of her ways, Mrs. Bertram recognized him at once.
 For one bright happy evening, at least, Warren Burr forgot his troubles, and they were serious ones. He had been a liberal man with the fortune left to him five years previously. There were few friends or relatives who had not benefited through his benevolence. He settled down finally with what he deemed was sufficient to provide for him the rest of his life. Later he became interested in a project for securing from the bed of three rivers where they came to a confluence, a gritty deposit which gave to cement an adhesiveness and stability of great value. He bought up all rights, went out for orders and received more than he could fill—built his grinding plant, and after investing his last dollar in the world was told by the house he had bought his engine from, that the last seven hundred dollars due on it must be paid before they would install it.
 Then it was that Burr had gone among his relatives to raise the last thousand dollars that would place the coping stone on his enterprise, to meet with bitter disappointment as noted. The only bright spot in his wanderings and useless importunities was that quiet, pleasant evening at the home of the Bertrams. The comfort, the contentment, the influence of kindly, honest hearts, made him wish he might cast aside all his dreams of fortune and forget his troubles and distresses and live in the congenial and ideal environment. He had announced his intended departure the next morning when, having sent the children to school and her mother busy in the kitchen, Lella Bertram came into the little parlor and sat down opposite her guest in a palpably disturbed and constrained way. Finally she spoke:
 "Mr. Burr, I do not wish to intrude upon your personal affairs, but I know you are having some deep trouble. I hope amid the same that you will not forget the friendship my dear husband felt for you, perpetuated with those of us who survive him. Mightn't my help, my counsel relieve you of your heavy load?"
 It was so kindly said that Burr could not resist a free confession. Mrs. Bertram regarded him with a compassionate interest that stirred him into action. She arose silently, went into another room and returned with a three-fold oblong envelope, which she tendered him.
 "What is this?" he inquired in some wonder.
 "Do you remember after my husband died sending me a thousand-dollar government bond to help me out of my troubles as the widow of your old partner," reminded Mrs. Bertram. "I never disposed of it, but oh! the many close corners it helped me to turn, as security to my creditors, as a sure, safe reserve to count on. Mr. Burr, the time has come when just that amount may save you. Willing, gladly, oh, so gladly! I ask you to use it, to risk it, to lose it, if it must be, in your business."
 It saved the day and found itself back with double interest into the kindly hands that had so freely bestowed it. But with success and new riches Warren Burr never ceased to covet the peace and harmony and comfort of the fair widow's home, and one day he told Lella Bertram how much, and became her sharer in that happy domain.

 Fiber That is Abundant in Haiti Has Been Mentioned as a Substitute for Wool.
 There are two varieties of kapok fibers to be found in Haiti, both products of trees of the Eriodendron family and both of good quality. The fly and both of good quality. The local names for the fiber vary according to locality; "marodem," "cot-ton mapou" and "cotton noir" are those most commonly used.
 Kapok is fairly abundant all over Haiti, but no commercial use has been made of it. The natives sometimes stuff pillows with it, and occasionally mattresses, but this is about the extent of its utilization. Indeed, all over the West Indies it is little used and has no fixed market value, except in Cuba, where it is a well-defined article of local trade, and where considerable quantities are brought from the Dominican Republic.
 There has been noted of late some interest in the substance in the United States, and it is being advertised as a cover for life preservers, cushions on steamers, pillows and the like. As an ideal filling for mattresses it is an ideal substance, exceedingly light, absorbent, sanitary and possessing such resilience that even after long use it does not lump or pack. As a quilting material for comforters and other bed coverings it equals wool in warmth and excels cotton in softness and lightness. For dressing gowns, smoking jackets and other padded garments it has much to recommend it. For upholstery it is superior to most materials now in use.
 Kapok is used in England to some extent in the manufacture of hats, and is one of the longer varieties are mixed with cotton to impart a silky luster to fabrics. The regular kapok, however, has too short a fiber to spin. It is extremely inflammable, and this is its chief drawback. If the fiber could be so treated with chemicals as to eliminate this dangerous quality it would be very much more valuable.

ARE NOT REALLY VOCALISTS

Tree Frog and Locust Have Been Called So by Some, But Observation Shows Otherwise.
 The folk in the little brown house call the two musicians—one who makes music in the maple tree at the edge of the sidewalk and the other in the apple tree behind the house—"singers." But this, like much of our current information, is incorrect, says the Indianapolis News. They are not vocalists at all, neither of them. They are instrumentalists. The que at the front of the house turns up about mid-afternoon and as the sun goes down his notes rise higher and higher until about eight o'clock, when he ceases. It is then that the backyard performer begins. The performer in the maple tree is the cicada, which is usually and improperly called the locust; the one in the apple tree is the hyla versicolor, that is, the tree frog. Both are credited with phonic power; the tailless batrachian is held to be a predictor of rain and the cicada in his shrill insistence announces that a frost is coming, coming in six weeks from the evening when he first began his nocturnal. But, it must be said, that little reliance can be placed on either of these minor prophets. The tree frog is a drummer. The instrument he thumps upon is his own abdomen, and as drumsticks he uses his own toes and fingers. The musical apparatus of the cicada is at the base of the abdomen. He is a fiddler—not a violinist—and he produces his music by drawing his wings and legs across his handy little fiddle.

Leader of Pickaninny Band Shows Himself Fully Capable of Dealing With Emergency.

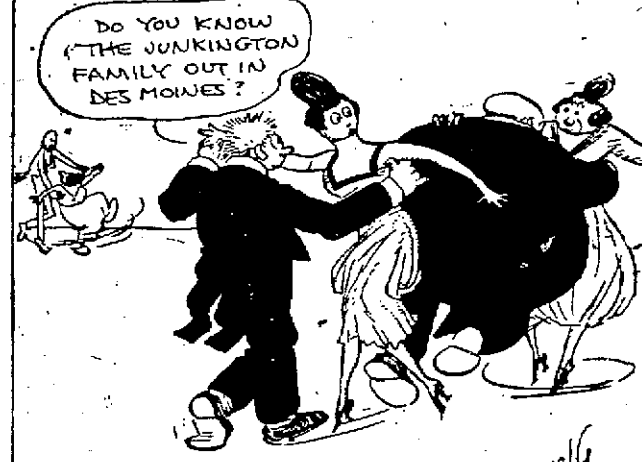

An itinerant pickaninny band halting from an orphan asylum in the South struck up lively airs in one of the streets and attracted attention, according to a Saratoga Springs correspondent of the New York Evening Post. The doughty little drum major, dressed in an imposing collection of colors, rested between airs and suggested to bystanders that they make contributions for the good of the cause. Four army officers stopped and bantered the leader until his soul grew vexed. Suddenly he had an inspiration and turning to his dozen jazz musicians he raised his baton and gave the signal for the "Star-Spangled Banner," which the darkeys played with earnestness and drew out as long as possible.

The officers, of course, immediately came to salute and remained in that posture until the grinning drum major brought down his baton on the final note. The officers appeared a bit in the face and proceeded along their way without attempting to "spoot" the band any further. They appeared to be making remarks sotto voce.
